LEWIS DID SAY SO

CARD FROM JUDGE LEWIS

Denies That He Ever Intimated That He Favored Miscegenation.

The Times-Dispatch prints below three interesting letters bearing on the ques-tion raised by Hon William A. Jones in his speech at Fredericksburg Monday night as to whether Judge L. L. Lewis, the Republican candidate for Governor declared in a joint debate with General Hundley at Chesterfield Courthouse years ago, that he was apposed to the statute forbidding the marriage of whites and blacks.

General Hundley insists that Judge Lewis did make this emphatic declaration; Judgé Lewis declares this statement to be untrue and Mr. S. S. P. Patteson gives his recollections of what occurred. The letters follow:

Judge Hundley Positive

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Sir, I notice Judge Lewis's denial of Hon, Wilham A. Jones's statement at Fredericksburg, which I think requires some statement by me in reference thereto. I have been brought into this discussion unwillingly from the beginning, as Hon. J. Taylor Ellyson knows, and will testify, but being in it I wish to make the facts clear and plain, and rid myself of the matter. As to my memory of the occurrence—that it as clear and vivid now as It was on the day of the debate, save in one particular. I do not remember the exact time, or whether the bill to prohibit the internarriage of whites and negroes had then become a law or not, but there is no doubt whatever that I did then propound to Judge Lewis the question as to whether he favored such a law, and he promptly replied that he opposed the policy of the law, and favored allowing all personsnegroes and whites—to marry whom they pleased. I did not expect him to make this reply, and was shocked at it beyond measure, and made a sharp retort, which it is not necessary to speak hero. It is roue, as Judge Lewis states, that he believed the law unconstitutional. It is also true, as Judge Lewis states, that he believed the law unconstitutional. It is also true, as Judge Lewis states, that he believed the law unconstitutional. It is also true, as Judge Lewis states, that he believed the law unconstitutional. It is also true, as Judge Lewis states, that he believed the law unconstitutional. It is also true, as Judge Lewis states, that make no allusion whatever to the Chesterfield debate, and I now frankly state my reasons for not mentioning the matter. In the first place, I did not think Judge Lewis state and I now frankly state my reasons for not mentioning the matter. In the first place, I did not think Judge Lewis state and I now frankly state my reasons for not mentioning the matter. In the first place, I did not think Judge Lewis state, and I now frankly state of the promate and long the place of the place of the first place of the place of th publish. I declined to do this for the reason that I did not desire to be drawn into a political discussion, occupying the position I do as a judge. I told Mr. Fillyson that he had not derived his information from me, and that others knew the facts, but if ever become necessary would still ever become necessary would still the very become necessary would still the property of the discussion, could doubless tell Judge Lewis why a report of his speech was not made at the time. He knows and told me why I was not dene.

I could not believe that a man of Judge Lewis's character really favored misceepanation, I attributed his surprising declaration to a lack of moral courage. The courage to tell his negro coherts, to ther faces that they could not hope for social in the stress of debate, and the negroes constitued his party in this State. Judge Lowis must determine which horn of the dileman he will take. I sincerely regressively in the stress of which horn of the dileman he will take. I sincerely regressionable matter and heartily wish that he had rested on his laurels as an admirable judge, and had never gone back into politics.

GEO, J. HUNDLEY. Farmville, Va., Oct. 18, 1966.

Farmville, Va., Oct. 18, 1906.

Judge Lewis Denies.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:
Sir,—In your paper of yesterday Mr. W.
A. Jones is reported to have said in his speech of the night before at Fredericks-burg that I on a certain occasion, in a joint discussion with General Hundley, about the year 1877 or 1878, at Chesterfield Courthouse, "advocated miscegonation in Virginia." That charge, in my communication to you of yesterday, I pronounced absolutely false. I observe that in this morning's paper Mr. Jones is reported as saying that he made no such charge. That, then, is a matter between thin and your correspondent, who reported his speech. He was certainly reported as making the charge, whether he did so or not. He says now he stated he had been credibly informed that I, on the occasion in question, in answer to a question by General Hundley, declared that I was "opposed to the bill then pending before the Legislature, the purpose of which was to prohibit the inter-marriage of the races, and favored allowing such inter-marriage if the races as desired." I observe also, that General from Parm. Ville, corroberates this charge.

I desire to say unqualifiedly and emphatically that the charge is not true, When yesterday I first read the report of Mr. Jones's speech, I could not recall that I had ever had a joint discussion at Chester-field in September, 188, with another geniteman, and supposed that General Hundley and upon further reflection. But after a conversation with Mr. S. S. P. Patteson, and upon further reflection, I am satisfied that the discussion in question was at Judge Lewis Denies.

never dreamed of doing so, nor is the idea of miscogenation less obnoxious to ine than to Mr. Jones or to General Hundley.

Mr. Patteson, who was present and head the discussion in question, tells me that he cannot remember whether I declared my opposition to the bill, or increly expressed a legal opinion in regard to it; that is to say, whether it was in my opinion constitutional or of doubtful constitutionality.

He says he remembers distinctly that he made a note at the time of my position, and that he the next day, I believe, furnished that hot to to the Richmond Dispatch, then the leading Democratic newspaper in Virginia and that the Dispatch refused to publish it, or at any rate did not publish it. This is to my mind convincing evidence that the sentiments now attributed to me by Messra. Jones and Hundley were not expressed by me, and that my reply to General Hundley's question did not go beyond the expression of a legal opinion. I was at the time holding the office of United States district attorney, and besides, belonged to a distinguished Virginian family, and no one, I take it, will readily believe that the Dispatch would have retused or falled to publish Mr. Patteson's report of the discussion, if that report conformed to General Hundley's present statement.

As I said in my communication of yesterday, no such point as that now made against me was made when I was elected a judge of the Court of Appeals, nor afterwards, when in 1895 Judge Hundley and I had a joint discussion at King William Courthouse. Why has the judge kept silent on this important subject all these years? He says he "personally likes Judge Lewis." He has a poor way of showing his friendship, and when it is remembered, as I am informed, that he is an avowed candidate for re-election to the judical office he now holds—which office is to be filled by the Legislature to the bidical office he now holds—which office is to be filled by the Legislature to the indical for re-election to the judical office he now holds—which office is to be f
